Woman's Province. THE DUTIES OF THE GENTLER SEN-HOW BEST FULFILLED,

What a great task is assigned to w man. Its dignity can not be elevated. It What a great task is assigned to woman. Its dignity can not be elevated. It is not her province to make laws, to lead armies, nor to be at the head of great enterprises, but to her is given the power to form those by whom the laws are made, to teach the leaders of mighty armies and the governors of vast empires. She is required to guard against having the slightest taint of bodily infirmity touch the frail creature whose moral, intellectual and physical being is derived from her. She must instil correct principles, inculcate right doctrines, and breathe into the soul of her offspring those pure sentiments which in time to come will be a part of themselves, and bless generations yet unborn. Yes, to woman is given the blessed-privilege of aiding the sufferer in all the various stages of his existence. She amiles serenely at the christening, and weeps at the burial, while she soothes the bereaved heart. This is her province and duty. Yet how can she fulfill her mission unless possessed of a strong and healthy body? The preparation of Dr. S. B. Hartman, and known as Pagura, is just the thing for persons suffering from a majority of the complaints incident to this climate. It is invaluable to women, and Mrs. J. W. Reynolds of New Lisbon, Columbiana county, Ohio, is a noted example of what the medicine can do. She says ahe has suffered for years with congestion of the lungs, catarrh in the head, and was troubled with a bad cough. She had tried a number of physicians, but they all failed to cure her. had tried a number of physicians, but they all failed to cure her. She was induced to try Peruna, and immediately a marked change took place. After using one bottle her cough ceased and in a short time her other allments were cured. She is now completely restored to health, and gives all the credit to Peruna. Mr. J. W. Reynolds, her husband, was a confirmed invalid. He could not sleep well, neither could he work. Heused Peruna, and as a result, was completely restored to his former vigor and strength. He says he now feels like a new man.

Mr. Bernhardt Seubs, St. Clair, St. Clair county, Mich., says: "I have thoroughly tried your Peruna and a large family of children are ever liable, and I find it in every case to be just the thing needed. No family can honestly be without it."

Nancy Feterman, Cookport, Indiana County, Pa., says: "Gestlemen: Your valuable Peruna is the best medicine I ever used."

ome Traditions Concerning Lord Fairfax

by the Western man who makes an effort:

"One day I was driving my engine over the pratirie at the rate of forty miles an hour, without a house in sight, and supposing the nearest town to be thirty miles an hour, miles an hour, without a house in sight, and supposing the nearest town to be thirty miles an hour, makes an early the pratirie at the rate of forty miles and hour, without a house in sight, and supposing the nearest town to be thirty miles and hour, without a house in sight, and supposing the nearest town to be thirty miles distant. But as I glanced ahead I was astonished to see that I was approaching a large city. I rubbed my eyes, thinking it was a miracle.

"Jim," says I to the fireman, 'what's this place?

"Blamed if I know,' says Jim, staring out of the cab. 'I declare if there ain't a new town growed up here since we went in over the line yesterday!

"I believe you are right, Jim. Ring the left of the original stone, and this new one still stands intact.

but the United States Government several years ago erected a duplicate within a few feet of the original stone, and this new one still stands intact.

Concerning his lordship I have been able to pick up a few facts and traditions. Kercheval's history of the Valley of Virginia (1833), says: "Charles IJ, King of England, granted to the ancestors of the late Lord Fairfax all the lands lying between the headwaters of the Potomac and Rappahannock to the Chesapeake bay. The immense Fairfax estate has passed out of the hands of Fairfax's heirs. The lands were granted in fee simple to his tenants, subject to an annual rent of two shillings sterling per hundred acres. This small rent amounted in the aggregate to a very large sum; added to which Fairfax required the payment of ten shillings sterling on each fifty acres, which was paid on issuing the grant. About the year 1742 his lordship opened his office in the county of Frederick and settled at what he called 'Greenway-Court,' about 12 or 14 miles southeast of Winchester, where he kept his land office during his life. * * * Fairfax's representatives soon sold out their interest in his private estate in this country, and it is believed there is no part of this vast estate remaining in the hands of any branch of the Fairfax is not part of the children to inherit his vast estate; but devised his property, or a large portion of it, to the Rev. Denny, Martin, his nephew in England. The sale of the estate of Lord Fairfax by his legatees in England is the last chapter in the history of the Fairfax interest in the Northern Neck, a territory comprising about one-fourth of the whole of the present limits of Virginia."

erritory comprising about one-fourth of ne whole of the present limits of Vir-

A foot-note says: "Cohongoruton is the ancient Indian name of the Potomac from its junction with the river Shenandoah to the Allegheny mountains. Lord Fairfax, in his grants for lands of this water-course, designated it Potomac; by which means it gradually lost its ancient name, and now is generally known by no other name."

ORIGIN OF HAMPSHIRE COUNTY.

The same author relates the following radition: "Lord Fairfax, happening one day in Winchester to see a large drove of inusually fine hogs passing through the town, inquired from whence they came. Being informed that they were from the mountains westward, he remarked that when a new county should be haid off in that direction it ought to be called Hampshire, after a county in England celebrated for its production of fine hogs; and this, it is said, gave name to the present county of Hampshire."

Another account of Fairfax says: "His lordship lived and died in a single clap-board story and a half house, which stood just in front of the modern brick dwelling of Mr. Kennerly, and was destroyed in 1834. Fairfax had probably 150 negro servants, who lived in log huts own, inquired from whence they came.

A few years since, in excavating the grounds near the house, Mr. Kennerly discovered a large number of joes and half-joes, amounting to about $250; they were what is teruged cab-coin, of a square form and dated 1733. They were supposed to have been secreted there by Lord Fairfax.

HEALTH HINTS

For the Farmer-How the Cellar Should be Mr. A. T. McKelvey, of St. Clairsville, O., writes to the Ohio State Journal on far matters as follows:

The "Seasonable Suggestions" published in the Sate Journal last fall protesting against the folly of cramming the farm-house cellar with fruits and vegetables, thereby endangering the life and health of the inmates of the house, has suggested some health hints for thoughful farmers worthy of their careful consideration.

THE OCCUPATION OF FARMING.

Perhaps no one will deny that, other things being equal, the occupation of farming is the most healthful pursued by man—a life measurably free from the caukering care and anxious solicitude that attaches to the uncertain occupations of the town. The farmer labors in the open air, pursuing work that calls into activity every muscle of the body, stirring a soil that stimulates an eager appetite for healthful food, and breathing an air uncontaminated by the poisonous gases of filthy sewers, an air at once the source of health and inspiration.

WHAT STATISTICS SHOW. . THE OCCUPATION OF PARMING.

WHAT STATISTICS SHOW. Yet statistics show that with every ad-Yet statistics show that with every advantage of situation and surroundings conducive to health and longevity, the mortality in rural districts is proportionately greater than in large cities. This is especially noticeable in zymotic diseases, such as typhoid fever and diphtheria, which, according to the last census reports, are more prevalent in rural districts than in crowded cities, owing mainly to the imperfect sanitary arrangements of the larmer's home.

FILTHY CELLARS.

Next to damp, unhealthy cellars, that fill the atmosphere of the home with the deadly miasma arising from their bins of stored fruit and vegetables, the most fertile source of death and disease upon the farm is

For the convenience of the farmer's family the well is ordinarily sunk in close proximity to the home. But unfortunately, through ignorance or carelessness, the house and kitchen slops of many families are cast upon the ground just outside the door, all of which in the most direct manner passes down into the well, rendering the water impure and unwholesome. Proner passes down into the well, rendering the water impure and unwholesome. Pro-fessor Orton, of the State university, says that an ordinary drinking well will drain the surface of the ground upon which it is located for an area in circumference equal to its depth; hence the importance of con-ducting the house slops to a point rempte from the water supply. Portland, Me.,

DANGEROUSLY CLOSE.

And there are well authenticated statements of closet vaults reported to have been sunk so close to the drinking well that clearly defined channels have been discovered connecting them, through which there flowed impurities defiling the well and producing a plague as direful and disastrous as ever befell the ancient Egyptions lans.

EARTH CLOSETS.

The abominably offensive closet vault is tolerated in the cities, where it is difficult and costly to maintain earth closets, but every farmer may erect a healthful and incollensive earth closet at a slight cost and with but little labor. Let me suggest a simple plan: Construct an ordinary closet and set it upon four locust props, or better, four stone pillars two and one-half feet above the ground. Beneath this structure place a strong, square, wooden box, eighteen inches deep and attached to sled runners six inches high, and the work is complete. And now with a barrel of dry earth to absorb the impurities, the danger and dread of the privy vault is removed, Every three or six months a horse can be attached to this sled, and its contents scattered over the fields as a fertilizer.

SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS. EARTH CLOSETS.

SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS

SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS.

Let me ure upon all farmers who value the health and comfort of their families to adopt these simple precautions as a safeguard against languishing fever or deadly diphtheria. Their importance is emphasized by the mortality reports of the last census, from which we extract this brief summary:

"Typhoid fever and diphtheria are more prevalent in small towns and rural districts, which have no system of sewerage and obtain their water supply from springs and wells and observe the usual custom of storing excreta in cesspools or vaults."

GOOD DRAINAGE.

discover the course of the fox. Following his directions, his lordship would start after the game, and in moet cases secure the prize and stick the tail of the fox in his hat in triumph."
